Counselling and support for relatives of patients in the psychiatry in Central Denmark Region

In the psychiatry of Central Denmark Region, we consider adult relatives to be important support persons, serving as a mouthpiece for the patient, and they are therefore significant persons to the employees. The relatives also carry much responsibility in everyday life, having themselves the need for support, information and relief. Therefore, the employees must strive to create the best possible conditions for dialogue and meetings between the patient, the relatives and the network. This means that the contact person of the mentally ill person is obligated to clarify the patient's personal relations immediately after the patient's first contact with the psychiatric system.

In case of admission to a psychiatric department, the contact person from this department has to invite close relatives to a meeting within seven days from the day of admission to discuss the treatment plan, aims and expectations.

In the local psychiatry, the patient is requested, by letter, to bring relatives to the initial meeting, where treatment plan, aims and expectations are being discussed.

On the patient's terms

To a large degree, the extent of co-operation is determined by the patient's wish to involve and inform his or her relatives. The employees are bound to observe professional secrecy, which means that they can only initiate concrete co-operation with the relatives if the patient wishes so. Professional secrecy – and with that the patient's right of self-determination – is a fundamental principle which is to be followed by the employees. However, it is always possible to receive general information about different mental disorders and their treatment.

The formal co-operation

In autumn 2008 the psychiatry in Central Denmark Region formulated a policy describing how to support the relatives. The policy issues clear guidelines for the employees concerning the care of the mentally ill patients' children. The policy is available at the website of the psychiatry of the Central Denmark Region:

www.rm.dk/psykiatri+og+social.

In co-operation with relatives' organisations, the psychiatry of Central Denmark Region regularly arranges introduction evenings and courses for relatives. The subject of these introduction evenings and courses is presentation of knowledge of mental illness and of the possibilities of treatment and support. The courses emphasise knowledge interchange and dialogue between the course participants as well as between the teachers and the course participants. Time and place of the courses and introduction evenings are announced at the website.
